"We wanted to fully utilize the data from our motion capture trials and use it to create the most realistic gaming experience possible for our players," said Jason Kaplan, Executive Producer of the game. "Passionate football fans will feel the energy of a fully simulated match, and we can't wait for them to experience what FIFA 22 is all about." The physical movement captured in FIFA 22 is taken from sessions involving 22 real-life players, including Club and national team players from around the world. As well as using these "in-game" data from the sessions, a mix of player modeling, agent based AI and new physics engine have also been used in the development of this sports title. Enhancements to Real Player Movements Now in-game, the physics engine used in the development of FIFA 22 tracks and records the player's movement in real-life matches to create the most realistic football experience yet. FIFA 22's latest in-game engine uses a new, more flexible motion capture capture method. This technology ensures that the movements of the players are captured correctly and closer to real life. This will translate into more consistent and believable player animations in the game. The engine uses a 6-degree of freedom (6DOF) tracking rig that can be adjusted by hand to capture more or less precise movement data. Several high-performance video capture devices, including NVIDIA's SHIELD, capture the movements of the players in real-time. The data is passed to a new physics engine that processes, enforces and calibrates the full range of player motion and movement dynamics. Using Player Motion Capture Two separate motion capture suits were worn by each player at the same time during FIFA 22's motion capture sessions. The suits were designed to capture different aspects of a player's movement, including full body movement, acceleration, rotation, velocity, jumping and attacking. Each player is given a "spline"—a graphical representation of how the body and limbs move—to track the players movements in-game. This allows FIFA 22 to accurately replicate a player's movements in-game. This is key in the creation of authentic moments, like: aerial duels, looking for space, intercepting the ball and more. The technology used to capture a player's movement in FIFA 22 is used to

The very best multiplayer football game, FIFA is back, and better than ever. FIFA 22 was designed by EA Canada, but the game has been enhanced by a talented team of designers from around the globe. With FIFA 22, EA SPORTS brings gamers closer to the authentic football experience than ever before. Featuring new and improved gameplay, the game's team and player intelligence has been enhanced, and the inclusion of real leagues, clubs and stadiums, combined with the always-improving game engine makes FIFA 22 one of the most authentic and exciting football experiences on the market. FIFA™ in the New Era FIFA 22 brings some of the biggest changes to the franchise in years. New and improved gameplay, in-game depth and improved AI make this year the most authentic, in-depth and dynamic game of football on the market. We're also introducing new and improved game modes and leagues, refined gameplay, and the return of online tournaments and leagues. With over a dozen game modes across single-player and online, and the expansion of players, teams, stadiums and game modes, this is the most expansive football experience of any generation. Players can improve their skills and play with any club or stadium in any league. In an enhanced dynamic career mode or take on the challenge in the new 8-player FUT Champions mode. This year, we wanted to combine the pure thrill of competition from elite one-on-one matches to bigger, more satisfying team modes. The campaign mode in FIFA 22 is enhanced with new flexibility in team selection, better support for international play and the addition of an all-new Champions league mode featuring all the top European and South American clubs. Plus, the new FUT Champions mode gives players the chance to compete in 8-player online tournaments, using clubs from all over the world and real leagues. In addition to the online modes, players can now experience the game in new ways. FIFA 22 introduces over 100 new features, improvements and new gameplay elements such as improvements in passing, shooting and team coordination. FIFA players have always wanted to perform their best in training, now you can see how your skill ratings match up with others in the form of the Training Centre. And the Football Intelligence team, led by footballing experience legend Paul Mariner, has added real-world tactics and strategies to enhance player intelligence and team tactics. New Playability The goal is always for FIFA to deliver what the football community has been
